Dell Gines, Senior Community Development Advisor, Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City

12:50pm  Group Photo (in front of Carnegie Library, 218 N 5th Street)

1:30pm  Breakout Session I

- History Meets Economic Development – Rehabilitation Projects & Incentive Programs
  Ryan Reed, Tax Incentive Coordinator, History Nebraska
  Do you have a local landmark that you are wanting to rehabilitate? Learn about the Valuation Incentive Program (VIP) and the Federal Historic Tax credit program, it could work for your community.

- Enhancing Quality of Life Through Placemaking
  Kim Wilson, University of Nebraska College of Architecture Professor
  Placemaking can restore or enhance community assets that support a high quality of life. As rural community’s economies, environments, and demographics continue to change and evolve, developing locally-driven solutions to these challenges is critical to the long-term vitality. By bringing in new ideas, businesses, amenities, and social spaces, rural towns can help foster place attachment and encourage young people to stay in or return to their communities. Learn criteria that you use in your community to strengthen place and quality of life. Put your new knowledge to use as you walk through Beatrice’s downtown during this session.

- Drinking in Local Entrepreneurship: A discussion on the evolution of the cider and craft beverage industry and its tie to community and agricultural success.
  Carla Snyder, Agricultural Entrepreneurship & Marketing Educator, Penn State University
  Agricultural products can directly create a Taste of Place in a community. Join us for a discussion on the evolution of the hard cider industry in Pennsylvania and how this craft beverage is experiencing a resurgence to enliven community tourism and regional connectedness throughout the U.S. as we take cues from other nations.
CONNECTING ENTREPRENEURIAL COMMUNITIES

• Community Fellows – It’s a Transformational Experience!
  Shawn Kaskie, RFI Outreach Project Coordinator and Theresa Klein, RFI Director of Community Engagement, along with Amber Ross and Samantha Guenther, UNL students and 2018 Serviceship Fellows
  Through a RFI serviceship fellows experience, communities are connected to college students and faculty, while students and faculty are connected to rural community mavericks. RFI Student Fellows, RFI Community Innovation Fellows and RFI Faculty Fellows are the inspirational and action-oriented mechanism by which RFI carries forward its mission and creates meaningful, tangible impact in the areas of workforce development, economic development, access and recruitment and retention of residents. Hear from two 2018 Serviceship Fellows and their transformational experiences and how your community can participate.

• Transfer of Leadership in Rural Communities
  Lindsay Hastings, UNL Department of Ag Leadership, Education & Communications Professor
  The United States is poised to experience its largest transfers of leadership (56% of management occupations) in its history. Preparing rural community leadership for these transitions will be critical. This presentation will review new research results in rural community leadership transfer, offering several important considerations for Nebraska’s leadership pipeline.

• Demographic Trends Impacting Your Business or Community
  David Drozd, Research Coordinator, UNO Center for Public Affairs Research
  Demographics play an important part in understanding your community. Demographic data can help your community to understand population changes and trends that impact community life and local economics. See how Nebraska’s demographic makeup is changing, and the impact of aging, and what to expect in the years ahead.

3:00pm Breakout Session II

• Downtown Upper Levels: Profiting from Housing and Other Creative Spaces (Walking Tour- limited to 20 – Meet at the corner of ?? & ?? streets)

- Increasing Community Engagement in a Digital Age
  Jeremy Harris Lipschultz, College of Communications, Fine Arts and Media, University of Nebraska-Omaha

  Increasing civic engagement in communities can be a challenge as traditional organization and communication patterns have changed. Through a Rural Futures funded project, we have worked with three communities to help increase civic engagement. This session will share practical steps that you can utilize in your community from establishing goals to measuring your reach. Understand potential resources that your community can use to increase civic engagement.

- Getting Smart About Shrink Smart
  David Peters, Department of Sociology, Iowa State University

  Learn how your community can continue to thrive despite depopulation. Peters has applied the shrink-smart concept to small towns to better understand the characteristics of shrinking yet thriving towns. Enhancing social capital, increasing civic engagement, and creating a culture of openness and support are all areas communities can focus on to continue thriving. Other suggestions include stabilizing agricultural employment and growing jobs in goods producing industries.

4:30pm Breakout Session III

- Taking on the Challenges of Main Street and Finding Success
  Michael Sothan, Executive Director, Main Street Beatrice

  The session will center on Main Street Beatrice’s past challenges, how as a community Beatrice has been working to overcome those challenges and next steps as they continue to build on their recent successes.

- Building Entrepreneurial Ecosystems and Cultures Within our Communities
  Michael W.P. Fortunato, Creative Insight Community Development

  It is well known that building the entrepreneurial skills of an individual can help a business to succeed. However, this approach is very different from building the entrepreneurial culture and capacity of an entire community. In this session, we will explore how a community's culture and ecosystems can not only help current entrepreneurs, but also attract new ones, and help everyday citizens to realize their entrepreneurial dreams. We will also discuss how ecosystems differ from networks and communities, and how any town can build an effective ecosystem for entrepreneurship development.

- Communities and Community Reinvestment Act – Changing Opportunities
  Dell Gines, Senior Community Development Advisor, Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City.

  The Community Reinvestment Act is a federally mandated tool designed to spur economic development in economically distressed areas. Learn how to better work with local banks to support job creation, education, workforce and housing issues.

- “SET”ting up a Regional Collaboration
Tim Borchers, Vice President for Academic Affairs, Peru State College and Rick Nelsen, Senior Economic Development Consultant, Nebraska Public Power District

Together, 5 counties in Southeast Nebraska are creating opportunities through a regional collaborative effort. Stronger Economies Together (SET) program helped the region create an economic plan and build capacity to address immediate and long-term economic concerns. Hear the ups and downs of regional collaboration learned through three years of practice.

- New Techniques to Catalyze Rural and Small Town Redevelopment
  Michael W.P. Fortunato, Creative Insight Community Development
  Rural areas, declining small towns, and isolated neighborhoods within cities can all be challenging places to launch a community redevelopment project, or catalyze community-based economic action. Due to stagnating economic conditions, the risk of investing in a redevelopment project can be very high. And yet, these neighborhoods are often the ones that need an economic boost or property facelift the most. Are rural areas, small towns, and isolated neighborhoods destined to decay, or to wait until the market changes (which may never happen)? In such situations, thinkers like E.F. Schumacher (Small is Beautiful) encourages us to avoid common best practices for land reuse and to think smaller and more locally to build the necessary momentum for revitalization. Using a suite of techniques known as "New Economy" strategies, developers can begin to think differently about how to mitigate the risks associated with projects in areas that are otherwise unlikely to be developed. With only a few small changes to how we think about land reuse in rural areas, it is possible to generate organic momentum around traditional and non-traditional projects.

- Benefits of the Cooperative Development Model
  Greg McKee, Department of Agricultural Economics Cooperative Development Professor, UNL
  Cooperatives benefits include providing a service in a community, improving bargaining power, reducing costs. And obtaining products or services otherwise unavailable. While Nebraska has a rich history of agricultural cooperatives, rural communities have the opportunity to explore the cooperatives for businesses in community to enhance and improve quality of life. Understand the benefits and how the cooperative model may work in your community or region.

- Inclusion at Work: Strategies for Success
  Luis Sotelo, Chief Diversity Officer, Doane University
  Communities and organizations thrive when people of all backgrounds, identities, and perspectives feel like they belong. As Nebraska demographics change, learn strategies to successfully lead diversity and inclusion in businesses, nonprofits, governments, and educational institutions to drive innovation, engagement and productivity. Doane University Chief Diversity Officer Luis Sotelo will guide you through strategic elements, resources and case studies to help you create inclusive environments that celebrate your organization's most valuable asset: human capital.

- Networks = Unleashed Leadership in Living Systems
  Kayla Schnuelle, Facilitator & Consultant, Mission Matters
  What are networks? How are they different? How do they add value to my organization, business or to me personally? The network leadership question for living systems is “What can I unleash?” This shifts the deep background assumption of leaders and reminds us that we are working with a living system instead of an inert one. When we ask: “What can I unleash?” we look for the energy flows and talents that already exist in our communities and on our teams. By unleashing talent, positive energy, or creativity, we see the network help us achieve our goals.
• Plan Implementation – Don’t Leave it to Chance
  Neal Fogle, Economic and Community Development Educator, Penn State University

  Various planning efforts are used by communities and organizations to evaluate their current conditions, document their expected future, and prepare action steps to achieve their community and/or organizational goals. Such plans include community visioning, municipal comprehensive, and organizational strategic plans. While these plans have similarities as well as differences in overall purpose, process and content, they all play a role in effective economic and community development. No matter the plan type, they should strive for ultimate implementation of the recommendations and policies that were developed during their creation. This session will focus on factors (before, during and after plan preparation), that influence plan implementation.

• Sticky Communities – It’s not just for Kids
  Jonathan Jank, President & CEO, Seward County Chamber & Development Partnership

  Seward County is working to create communities family-friendly environments that attract and retain people in the area. From gaining greater understanding of new residents to creating actions that fit their needs, Seward County is becoming a Sticky Community.

• Wrapping the Loan Package to Let’s Make a Deal
  Umeda Islamova, Center Director, University of Nebraska-Lincoln; Loren Kucera, Center Director, Wayne State College, Nebraska Business Development Center

  Entrepreneurs need and often seek financing to start and grow their businesses. What is your front door response for someone looking for help? How do you help them prepare and work with funders? What resources are there to help the entrepreneurs? This session will break down the steps and information needed to create better loan packages.

• Cooperative Development Success Story: 4th Street Market
  Sharlette Schwenniger, Elwood Cooperative Market

  Rural stores are an essential part of the social network in small towns. Everyone has to eat. Everyone needs groceries. When the grocery store closed, other businesses in town may also suffer a decrease in foot traffic. But we know that keeping the grocery store open in a small town is a real challenge. Learn how Elwood, population 698, banded together to open a cooperative grocery. Sharlette will share the successes and challenges.

• Unleashing Local Assets for Community Impact
  KC Belitz, Chief Operating Office, Nebraska Community Foundation, with community representatives, Joy Stillmock (Syracuse), Rick Kentfield (Lewiston), Beth Roelfs (Diller), and Tammy Weers (Diller)

  Communities across Nebraska are imagining a brighter future and using the tools of philanthropy to unleash abundant local assets in their place. Volunteers in communities, whether the population is 50 or 25,000, are connecting ambitious people to build stronger communities and a Greater Nebraska. You will hear 4 inspiring success stories from the Nebraska Community Foundation network that you can replicate in your hometown!

  Panelists will include: Joy Stilmock discussing expanded learning opportunities at the Syracuse Public Library; Rick Kentfield will share how partnering with local philanthropy expanded early childhood development and STEM opportunities at the Lewiston Consolidated School; and Beth Roelfs and Tammy Weers will tell the story of how the unrestricted endowment in Diller has built social fabric and community assets in their place. Moderator is K.C. Belitz, NCF’s Chief Operating Officer, who will also share the story of the Columbus “Quality of Life Centers.”
• Getting Smart About Shrink Smart
  David Peters, Department of Sociology, Iowa State University
  Learn how your community can continue to thrive despite depopulation. Peters has applied the shrink-smart concept to small towns to better understand the characteristics of shrinking yet thriving towns. Enhancing social capital, increasing civic engagement, and creating a culture of openness and support are all areas communities can focus on to continue thriving. Other suggestions include stabilizing agricultural employment and growing jobs in goods producing industries.

12:00pm   Closing Session | Keynote
Pioneering Language – Is the Vocabulary of Helping Small Towns an Obstacle to Their Very Success?
David Weaver, Director of Communications, Orton Family Foundation
What effect does the language we use have in predicting and inhibiting success in towns and rural places? Is there a way to think about communities in a new way, to create new outcomes?

Location: Vintage Venue, 620 Court Street, Beatrice NE  68310

12:45pm   Lunch on your own with Downtown Dollars
